

NEW SMOKE ALARM LAWS

Since January 2022, for properties being sold, leased or an existing lease renewed, the new legislation requires owners of properties to ensure that smoke alarms are:

- ✓ Installed in every bedroom, every hallway servicing bedrooms and every storey not containing bedrooms in the most likely path of travel to exit the dwelling.
- ✓ Interconnected to all other smoke alarms in the dwelling.
- ✓ Photoelectric type only that complies with AS:3786-2014.
- ✓ Powered by an enduring power source (either hard-wired to the building's electricity supply or contain a sealed battery that is capable of powering the smoke alarm for a minimum of 10 years from the date of manufacture).

SMOKE ALARM MAINTENANCE

The Queensland Smoke Alarm Legislation also requires property owners to ensure:

- ✓ The required amount of smoke alarms are installed, they meet Australian Standards and are correctly located.
- ✓ Smoke alarms are tested and cleaned within 30 days prior to the start of each tenancy or lease, renewal/extension, and batteries are replaced, if required
- ✓ Smoke alarms are replaced before they reach the end of their service life or replaced immediately upon discovering an alarm has ceased to function correctly.

Quickcheck's helpful team provide a water meter reading service for our clients. BLIND CORD COMPLIANCE

Quickcheck provides a blind cord compliance service. Laws concerning the installation and supply of window coverings came into effect in January 2015. Whilst these laws only concern the supply of new window furnishings and are not retrospective, lessors have a duty of care to tenants and must ensure the property is safe to live in. Lessors are responsible for ensuring that corded window furnishings meet with the mandatory safety standards.
